THE PRAYERS OF A FAITHFUL SOUL. 129 said that now there was no longer as much occasion for reticence and seclusion. The princess was already in correspondence with some of her relatives at Coburg, but neither of the cousins there had yet visited London, and the dear old grandmother, the Dowager-duchess of Coburg, was no more to look upon the face of the little May-flower whom she loved so well. She had written to the Duchess of Kent on the princess s eleventh birthday: My blessings and good wishes for the day which gave you the sweet blossom of May! May God preserve and protect the valuable life of that lovely flower from all danger that will beset her mind and heart! The rays of the sun are scorching at the height to which she may one day attain. It is only by the blessing of God that all the fine qualities He has put into that young soul can be kept pure and untarnished. How well I can sympathize with the feelings of anxiety that must possess you when that time comes. God, who has helped you through so many bitter hours of grief, will be your help still. Put your trust in Him. She wrote again in the following June, after the death of George the Fourth: God bless old England, where my beloved children live, and where the sweet blossom of May may one day reign! May God yet for...
