The introduction of contract production arrangements also played a significant role in the evolution of U. S. hog production. In contract production, a pig owner (the contractor) engages a producer (the grower) to take custody of the pigs and care for them in the producers facilities; compensation depends on a predetermined formula. Contractors typically furnish inputs to growers, provide technical assistance, and assemble the hogs to pass on for nal processing or marketing. Contractors often market hogs through marketing contracts or other arrangements with packers or processors, who can also contract directly with growers. Data This study uses information from surveys of U. S. hog producers conducted in 1998 and 2004 as part of USDAs annual Agricultural Resource Management Survey (ARMS). The detailed surveys cover a cross-section of U. S. hog operations and collect information on production costs, business arrangements, production facilities and practices, and farm operator and nancial characteristics. The surveys also provide information about manure storage and handling, fertilizer use, manure application techniques, payments received under the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP), use of comprehensive nutrient management plans (CNMP), and manure application rates. The data allow us to document the current state of manure management and provide information about producers emerging responses to existing and anticipated manure-related regulations. The sample of hog farms was chosen from a list of operations maintained by USDAs National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS). The target population of each survey was farms having 25 or more hogs at any time during the year. Farms with fewer than 25 hogs were removed to exclude operations that raise hogs primarily for onfarm consumption...
